

Abstract of Disclosure

A cryogenic power conditioning system for fuel cells is proposed which is cooled by liquid hydrogen or liquid natural gas (methane) feeding these fuel cells or by liquid nitrogen supplied by high-temperature superconducting cables. The main application are vehicles such as transit buses, etc. The result is higher efficiency, lower weight, smaller size and lower cost.